the means of providing shelter in modified existing Federal buildings.

Secretary Anderson expressed the opinion that it might be wise to select and concentrate on one example of shelter in an existing Federal building. We would thus be doing something by way of setting an example for the people of the U.S. and would also in the course of so doing learn what is the best kind of shelter to build. Governor Hoegh replied to Secretary Anderson that the OCDM believed that we already knew pretty well what was needed in the way of building fall-out shelters.

The President concluded the discussion by stating that we should wait a day or two and then make our decision.

The National Security Council:

- a. Noted and discussed the report on the subject by the Director, Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization, contained in the enclosures to the reference memoranda of November 5 and 18; in the light of the views of the Joint Chiefs of Staff thereon, transmitted by the reference memorandum of December 4, 1958, and the views of the Director, Bureau of the Budget as presented orally at the meeting.
- b. Noted the President's statement deferring action for a short period on the recommendations presented in a above, pending further consideration of these recommendations by the President and the other officials most directly concerned.

2. SIGNIFICANT WORLD DEVELOPMENTS AFFECTING U.S. SECURITY

The Director of Central Intelligence explained to the members of the Council that Mr. Gordon Gray had complained of the gloomy tone of most of his intelligence briefings to the National Security Council and indeed had gone on to offer a dollar for every cheerful item which he, Mr. Dulles, presented. After the laughter had subsided, Mr. Dulles explained that the gloomy character of many of his items derived from the fact that it was his duty, of course, to present only those situations which required the attention of the President and members of the Council. Even so, he had today

With regard to the situation in Berlin, Mr. Dulles indicated that there was a good deal in the way of second thoughts by the Western Germans and by Adenauer himself. They are taking a more moderate view on how to react to what had transpired respecting Berlin. They now take the view that the Germans have got to look at the situation seriously and that a mere repudiation of Khrushchev's terms would not be enough. They are also afraid, continued Mr. Dulles, that the German issue will become involved with German domestic politics.

As a result of the Berlin election, the Social Democratic Party now had an absolute majority in the Berlin City Assembly.

The National Security Council:

- a. Noted and discussed an oral briefing by the Director of Central Intelligence on the subject, with specific reference to the exemplary conduct of U.S. forces deployed in Lebanon last summer and autumn, the results of the recent election in Venezuela and the implications thereof, and recent developments in the Middle East and in Berlin.
- b. Noted the President's request that the Department of Defense provide him with a short draft statement reflecting the superior conduct of U.S. forces engaged in the Lebanon operation, which could be transmitted to the several military services by the President in the interest of morale.

NOTE: The action in b above, as approved by the President, subsequently transmitted to the Secretary of Defense for appropriate implementation.

3. DECEMBER 1958 NATO MINISTERIAL MEETING

Mr. Gray said he understood that Secretary Herter was prepared to talk briefly about the forthcoming NATO Ministerial Meeting in

The President then invited a certain number of those present to join him in his office to discuss further the situation in Berlin and U.S. courses of action to meet it. Attached is an account of what transpired at this meeting as recorded by Mr. James S. Lay, Jr., the Executive Secretary of the National Security Council.

The National Security Council:

- a. Noted and discussed the reference Progress Report on the subject by the Operations Coordinating Board.
- b. Noted the President's reiteration of his belief that official broadcasts of the Voice of America radio should primarily be devoted to providing factual news, whereas broadcasts designed to entertain or engage in propaganda or political action should, so far as possible, be the product of indigenous facilities, with U.S. support as appropriate, and of non-U.S.-Government-sponsored activities. The President expressed his gratification that important progress has been made toward achieving this aim.

NOTE: The action in b above, as approved by the President, subsequently referred to the Operations Coordinating Board.
